I agree with this opinion. Children under age 12 cannot deal with problems properly. For example, they cannot solve online bullying by themselves. Trying to solve it by themselves could make the situation even worse. Besides, they cannot control their desires yet. If they use a mobile phone unsupervised, they could become dependent on it. They need someone to protect them from such danger. Therefore, it is good for them to prohibit the use of any type of mobile phones totally.

反対

I disagree with this opinion. First, children under age 12 also must live in this society. That is to say, they have to deal with a lot of information. To avoid troubles in future, they should be familiar with mobile phones from a young age. Secondly, it will be the most useful tool to cultivate their communication skills and stimulate their interest if used properly. So, I think children should be permitted to have mobile phones if parents or teachers can control the situation.
